About the Keynote Speaker

Dr. Charles Halverson is Professor Emeritus of Child and Family Development in the University of Georgia's College of Family and Consumer Sciences. He received a Ph.D. in Personality Psychology from Syracuse University and a B.A. in Psychology from the University of New Mexico.

He is interested in the biological and social contributors to the development of personality and social competence in children. His research focuses on gender-role development as well as the study of behavior problems as they impact the family and social relationships over the life course.
